“ Growing up in Chatham, I had three buddies living within one block of me named Charles: Charles Rodgers, Charles Pitchford and Charles Oliver Miles, Where has everyone gone?

Charles Miles was the only one of the gang who never moved away from the old neighborhood. I often referred to Charley as the 'Mayor of 79th Street', who could be found somewhere along the strip socializing.

I have an old foot-high black wooden clinched fist, with an extended middle finger, Charles gave me back in 1968. He had recently returned from a tour in South Korea, while serving in the Army. I was a Marine, who had just returned from Viet Nam. Originally, we only considered the wooden finger present a joke. Now it shall only remind me of the friendship we had, and the way we took on the world.

My dear old friend Charles is in God's open hand now. He will be missed, and that is no joke.
