“ Uncle Akinola,

Nothing more to say but wish I knew you well enough. We had a short but surreal conversation for the first time ever and I wondered what you will sound like. We had a great telephone conversation and you checked up with me on pretty much everything I was doing. The smile on your face was priceless.

Rest in perfect peace my dear uncle, until we meet again.

“ Akinola Adegoke Areo Ojo

I never knew I will have to write a tribute to you, it should have been the other way round.

My only brother who I wished to see again but your death has put a stop to that. When you knew I was interested in music you bought me a violin which I play in the choir at church.

I will always remember when we were growing up as that smiling brilliant gentleman who struggled to make something for himself in this life.

The long chats we have when the calls go through discussing diverse things.

Who are we to question the Almighty God our maker. He knows best.

You will forever live in my heart .

“AkeyinSuper as I will fondly call. You were a truly super brother. Gentle, soft spoken with an infectious laughter that I will sorely miss. You were very intelligent and hardworking, all through St Gregory’s College and Ibadan Polytechnique and I was very proud of you when you got on the Honor’s list at the Mies van der Rohe IIT College of Architecture, Illinois Institute of Technology, USA. We had an Ojo trademark of having long telephone conversations till our phones were hot and our batteries died. Visits to see you in Chicago were fun times, talking, site seeing and reliving memories of childhood.

Growing up, you were my play mate - You taught me how to play cricket, ride a bicycle, drive a car and scrub the terrazzo floors when we did our chores. AkeyinSuper, you made yourself happy as you crossed deserts, because you were able to find an oasis in the depths of your soul. I knew you to thank God for the miracle of life.

You remind me of a Christian soldier, fighting with courage and dignity, always with faith that you can face tomorrow because Jesus lives.

You lived your life as a peace loving person, and you slept in the Lord, in a very peaceful way. It is goodnight my darling brother, I will miss you.

“ TRIBUTE TO MY DEAREST BROTHER,
AKINOLA OJO

Akinola, you were one in a million. A unique personality. You will always remain in my heart. I still cannot believe what happened as daily I lifted your picture up to the Lord in prayers until I was informed that you had slept in the Lord. It is like a dream to me that you are gone. It was joy unlimited when Akinola Ojo was born into the family of late Pa Olateju Ishola Ojo and Mama Grace Ojo on August 28, 1960. He was the first and only male in a family of five children. I remember that you were exceptionally brilliant throughout your primary, secondary up to the time you traveled abroad to study architecture at the Illinois Institute of Technology, Illinois, USA. I still remember my late father proudly telling his friends that his son still retained his position on the dean's list of the university. Life dealt with him but he never gave up easily. Though raised a Baptist, Akinola was a catholic at heart because he had his secondary school at St Gregory College, Lagos. He exuded love to all around him and was ready to help me in my Pharmacy anytime he was called upon to assist. He was my cook when i gave birth. I truly enjoyed my stay with you in Chicago with Remi Oladeinde (God bless you for your show of love always) and the times you came visiting whenever I and my siblings were on holidays in Atlanta, Georgia. My prayers and wishes for you, Akinola, is to make a glorious and triumphant entry into heaven having gone through stuff here on earth. Though I feel saddened that you are gone, I am assured by the scripture that you will make heaven and by His Grace we will meet again to part no more. Adieu my dearest brother as you continue to Rest in Perfect Peace.
