“ Laying you to rest today has by far been the hardest thing I've ever endured. You were the light in our lives and now everything seems so dark. I know you're at peace and happy to be reunited with your parents, siblings. But we sure miss you down here. I miss you down here. Auntie I don't know what I'll do without you, but I do know I'll continue to do right by you, your legacy as long as I have breath in my body. I love you more than you'll ever know. Until we see each other again. Love Sulu.

“ What do you do when the person who is there in both good and bad times is gone. The person who won't let life or you break you. The person who will check you and encourage you all at the same time. I feel like I just lost a big piece of me, but in my heart I know you would want me to be strong as only you would have it. I can never thank you enough for being the you that I needed. There will never in my life be another Betty Jean, you were my aunt, my bonus grandmother, my bonus mother, and part of my village. I can never thank you enough for being everything my children ever needed and being part of my village for them. I know it got a little darker down here, but heaven just got so much brighter. I will miss our talks, but know in my dreams we'll talk again. I promise my family, your Sulou (Alexa), Poo Poo (Aries), and little Sulou (Alaiya) will make you proud. I love you auntie. Take your rest now, you earned it

“ *You were more than an auntie to me. You stepped in the role of a mother figure for the past 20 years and I loved you as a mother. I praise God that you no longer have to endure all that was going on with you. I asked God to heal you and age did just that! You are no longer suffering, pain, or discomfort. Yes...this still hurts...but thank you for leaving everlasting memories that I will always cherish. Sleep on my sweet Angel one and take your test. I love you but God loves you best!
Love, your favorite ❤️*
