“ Nacissa Loving is affectionately known as Auntie Joe. Aunti loved her family with everything she had. I remember going to her house as a child and eating fortune cookies and playing with my brother as sister. As I got older Aunti would always tell me stories of my childhood. But a story I'd like to share is that of how big of person Aunti was in my eyes. Now I stand 6'3 and Aunti seemed to be 5'3. One day my brother and I were playing basketball up the street from Aunti house. When we finished looked for my Red "Chicago Bulls" starter jacket and it was missing. I was terrified to tell my parents it had be taken, but when I got home I had to tell them and Aunti was there. Without hesitation she grabbed a pistol and went outside and grabbed a kid and said something like..." I don't care who has it or who did it but if my nephew's jacket isn't back on this porch by 4, there's gonna be a problem". And before 4pm my jacket was back. I'm my eyes this 5'2 lady was 7'6. I love you Aunti

HA

“ She and I were riding in the car. She was telling me a story about my Dad (Milton) and her riding in the car together and he was speeding. Auntie told Milton to slow down he told her he was driving. She said ok and kept quiet. Then out of nowhere those Christmas Tree lights was on his bumper. Now every time I see a cops car lights on I am reminded of this story. They they really do look like Christmas Tree Lights. I never thought about them that way prior to this story.

Merry Christmas

P. S. May the only lights we see are the ones that we put up on the tree and in the windows.
